

KECHARA DISCOVERY

Formed in November 2007, Kechara Discovery is headed by Paul Yap who works to fulfil the department's two portfolios.

Kechara Discovery's main focus is the sourcing of Buddhist statues, to bring better quality and prices to practitioners. Our ever-increasing group of suppliers gives us access to a wider range of statues and diversity of styles. This strategy also ensures supply stability, as it does not leave us dependent on only a few suppliers. Although our range of statues may be wide, guidance from His Eminence Tsem Tulku Rinpoche guarantees that our statues are always iconographically accurate.

Statues from Kechara Discovery are primarily commissioned to supply to Kechara's Dharma outlets (Kechara Paradise). Large statues are being commissioned for our future retreat land, Kechara World Peace Centre.

Kechara Discovery's work to source statues has given us an unparalleled familiarity of Asian countries with a history of Buddhism. In the near future, this familiarity will be utilised to organise tours to Buddhist pilgrimage areas such as India, China and Nepal where our staff regularly travel.
